Brown park signs are posted along both Route 178 and Route 71 labeling park parking lots and trailheads. Brown park signs are also listed at every trail intersection including the main sidewalk leading from the main parking lot to the visitor center detailing feature locations with directional arrows.

Q: Are there any flat trails without stairs at the park?

A: Due to the topography (lay of the land) of the park trails are uneven and contain major and minor staircases of 5-200 steps each, in order for visitors to gain access to the sandstone canyons and bluffs at the park.

Illinois, Ottawa, and Kaskaskia Canyons trails do not contain staircases but there are a few creek crossings where feet may get muddy or wet in the winter and spring and the trail surface is not paved and will be uneven in areas.

Q: Are there any ADA compliant trails for those with impaired mobility?

A: Due to the topography of the park's canyons and bluffs there are no ADA compliant trails.

The only ADA compliant trails are the sidewalks approaching and surrounding the Starved Rock Lodge where visitors can view the Art in the Park wooden tree carvings, and the area surrounding the Starved Rock Visitor Center where you can view the bird feeders, prairie garden, and exhibits within the visitor center depicting the parks history, geology, and ecology. Movies in the park are also available inside of the visitor center by request from 9 to 3:30 daily.

Q: What are the trails like? Are they paved, muddy, icy, or hard to climb?

A: Trails are natural dirt and sand paths with several wooden or metal staircases and decking which cover the overlooks such as Starved Rock, Eagle Cliff, and Lovers Leap.

Trail conditions vary by the season:

Winter: Trails will be icy and snow packed. Traction devices such as micro cleats or Yaktrax on hiking boots are highly recommended.

Spring: Trails will be very muddy with standing water in a few areas. Waterproof hiking shoes are highly recommended, and a change of dry socks and clean shoes for the ride home. Please do not wash your shoes off in the park's sinks.

Summer: Trails will be dry, and waterfalls will dry out in the months of June through early October. Visitors are asked to pack plenty of water for themselves and their pets in order to stay hydrated and cool on the trails in the heat of the day. Too many hikers and pets become exposed to heat exhaustion and even heat stroke during the hot summer months of hiking at either park.

Overlooks such as Starved Rock, Eagle Cliff, and Lovers Leap will have the most exposure to the sun. Canyons will stay shaded and cool in the summer.

Fall: Trails can be either dry or muddy depending on rainfall within the areas of Utica, Ottawa, and Oglesby, Illinois. Fall colors typically peak the 2nd to 3rd week of October depending on the previous summer's weather. Fall colors can be seen throughout the park with the best views from the overlooks at Starved Rock, Lovers Leap, and Eagle Cliff.*

Q: What is the best trail?

A: Every trail and feature is the "best" at the park! The best part of Starved Rock is that the topography of the sandstone canyons and bluffs can be seen throughout the park's 13 miles of trails. The best trail is whatever trail you choose to take and the miles you are willing to hike.

Q: Where can I find trail suggestions?

A: Visitors can view trail suggestions and trail suggestion videos online through the IDNR Starved Rock page at dnr.illinois.gov/parks/activity/park.starvedrock.html .

Q: Where can I find trail maps?

A: Maps can be downloaded through the IDNR Starved Rock page at dnr.illinois.gov/parks/park.starvedrock.html or QR codes located on stationary trail maps throughout the park can be downloaded directly to visitor cellphones. Trail maps are also located at every parking lot, Lodge, Visitor Center, and trail intersection throughout the park. The park is going paperless (maps) in 2023.

Q: Are there bathrooms or water fountains on the trails?

A: Due to the topography of the park's canyons there are no bathrooms, trash cans, or water fountains located on the trail system. Bathrooms are located at the Starved Rock Lodge, Starved Rock Visitor Center, Lone Point Shelter, La Salle Canyon parking lot, Overflow parking, and the main parking lot in front of the Starved Rock Visitor Center.

Trash cans are located at trailheads, parking lots, and picnic areas only. Visitors are asked to leave no trace and pack out anything they pack into the trails. This helps the park stay green and clean.

Q: Are there any trails or areas that are closed?

A: Always refer these types of questions to the visitor center. Not a phone call on weekends, please. We ask that visitors stop in at the visitor center or view the IDNR website online at dnr.illinois.gov/parks/park.starvedrock.html for park closures.

Currently, the Brown Bluff trail above French Canyon, Tonti Canyon, and Owl Canyon Overlook is closed to all visitors. Other closures that will happen periodically are due to flooding or trail repairs and will be posted on the park's phone message as well as the IDNR website.

Q: Where are the waterfalls?

A: Waterfalls are located in canyons along green-marked trails. Waterfalls are generated by snowmelt and rainfall. They occur March through June but, may dry out late June through October. Heavy rains, snowfall, and snow melt in the months of November through March may replenish the canyon waterfalls.

Wading and swimming or using the canyons as waterslides are prohibited and dangerous activities. Fines start at $195 per person.

There are 8 canyon waterfalls that are accessible to visitors: French, Wildcat, La Salle, Ottawa, Kaskaskia, Illinois, St. Louis, and Aurora.

Q: When and where can I see icefalls?

A: Icefalls can be found in the sandstone canyons along green-marked trails at the park in the month of January. There are 8: French (not suitable in winter for those without micro cleats or Yaktrax), Wildcat, La Salle (not suitable in winter for those without micro cleats or Yaktrax), Ottawa, Kaskaskia, Illinois, St. Louis, and Aurora. Tonti is closed to hikers.

Ice climbers can view further information on the Starved Rock page through the IDNR website at dnr.illinois.gov/parks/activity/park.starvedrock.html and follow Ice Climbing Starved Rock on Facebook for updates given by local ice climbers during the season.

Q: Where and when can I see bald eagles?

A: Bald eagles can be seen throughout the year fishing along the Illinois River. Greater concentrations of eagles can be seen perched on Leopold or Plum Island in front of the Starved Rock Lock and Dam when the Illinois River freezes over in the month of January depending on the temperatures that season.

The best viewing locations in the month of January are from the sandstone butte known as Starved Rock, the sea wall along the Illinois River across from the visitor center, or the Illinois Waterway Visitor Center located just across from the park off of Dee Bennett Road.

Q: When will leaves start to change color in the Fall? When is the peak color in the Fall?

A: Leaves typically begin changing to yellows, browns, oranges, reds, and purples during the 2nd and 3rd weeks of October. Peak season is never the same time of year. It fluctuates based on the weather seen during the growing season the previous summer.

Q: Are dogs allowed?

A: Yes, dogs are allowed at the park, but not inside of the buildings unless they are certified service animals with a vest or collar. Dogs must always be kept on a leash, provided water, and never left unattended, or left alone inside of a parked vehicle.

Q: Does the park allow rock climbing?

A: Rock climbing is not allowed anywhere within the park due to the fragile sandstone geology that composes each of the park's canyons, trail system, and bluffs. Fines for climbing or going off-trail start at $195 per person.

Q: Can I fly my drone at the park?

A: Drones are not allowed at Starved Rock State Park due to the number of visitors on the trails, picnic area, and overlooks, and the disturbance to wildlife such as the park's nesting bald eagle population.

Q: Can I bike along the trails at Starved Rock State Park?

A: Bikes are not allowed on the trails at Starved Rock due to the fragile sandstone geology, but you can travel just 2 miles south of the park to the Matthiessen Vermillion River Area (NOT allowed at the Dells area of Matthiessen) at Matthiessen State Park where there are biking trails to enjoy!

Q: Is camping allowed along the trails at the park?

A: Camping is only allowed at designated campsites at the Starved Rock State Park Campground located south of the park off Route 71 and E 950th Road. Reservations and further campground information can be found online through the IDNR Starved Rock page at dnr.illinois.gov/parks/camp/park.starvedrock.html
